GSA Plans to Sell BARC Parcel at Once

by Kelly A.J. Powers

In the end, it was a fight that gave the victor the victory long after the fight had been declared a draw.

The issue was the disposal of two parcels of land, totaling 260 acres, of the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center. These parcels had been declared "excess land" by the Government Services Administration; the land was to be disposed of — by being offered first to any Federal agency that wanted it, then to any state or local interest.

Outraged by this decision, many Maryland politicians rose to the battle and fought to stop the GSA from disposing of the land. Legislation was introduced, letters were written to Federal officials, and resolutions were passed to try to prevent BARC from losing the land.

The Center is internationally known for its research for solving food production, protection and distribution problems.

However, it's been over a year since GSA first declared the land excess (in February 1983) and it looks as though nothing is going to prevent it from getting rid of the land as it chooses. Recently, 25 of those 260 acres were given to the State Department, which plans to build an alternate Communications Center. The State Department has said that the center will not interfere with any of BARC's research projects.

This leaves 235 acres for GSA's disposal. Since a bill (SB-423) introduced by Maryland Senators Charles McC. Mathias and Paul Sarbanes was not passed in time before Congress adjourned in October, GSA has said there are no further restrictions that could stop it from releasing the land.

"In effect the bill is dead, since it was not passed in October by the time Congress adjourned," says Norm Miller, who works with the Assistant Commissioner of Real Property Disposal at GSA.

"So now we're in the process of deciding what to do with the land. We're waiting for results from a Department of Agriculture cultural resource study. We'll consider what that has to say, also get additional detailed information, and the excess report will be complete. Then we will proceed with the disposal of the land if no other legislation is re-introduced."

Statement from Hoyer

And that just might happen — Rep. Steny Hoyer's office has said it is considering filing legislation to stop the GSA when Congress reconvenes in January. "Something is definitely being considered for when Congress reconvenes on January 3. This legislation could stop it (the disposal). The pending legislation under consideration could affect those parcels of land, less than 25 acres that the State Department's been given," says Hoyer's spokesperson, Jesse Jacobs. "We have to care about this—it's our legislative district."

However, Miller says the pending legislation shouldn't slow them down any. When informed by a reporter from the News Review of Hoyer's plans, Miller said, "Well, it looks as though our hands will be tied again. If the committee chairman (in the House) asks us to postpone it, well, there's nothing we can do."

In a later phone conversation, Miller stressed that GSA would only postpone the release of the land if the Committee Chairman asked them to, but not anytime sooner. "Let me make one point — we will only postpone the process if the Committee Chairman requests us to. We won't stop at just the introduction of Hoyer's legislation. As I've said before, we're just waiting for the results of the study to come in and then we will proceed, provided no postponement is asked for. We do plan to go ahead and

by Eileen Peterson

Greenbelt's Arts Center celebrated its fifth birthday on a weekend that brought 850 people to performances of "The Nutcracker" ballet.

At Saturday night's champagne gala after the show, Mayor Gil Weidenfeld proclaimed "Greenbelt Arts Center Week" in the city. He cited the work of many volunteers—led by Arts Center President Konrad Herling—in establishing, renovating, organizing and publicizing the performing arts showplace in the heart of Greenbelt.

This Saturday, an art show and unveiling of a commissioned painting will be held in the City Council Room, sponsored by the Greenbelt Arts Trust, a fundraising arm of the Center.

Volunteers was a word used over and over in describing the work that has gone into the Center. Frances Herling was honored with a plaque and corsage for her five years as organizer of box office, refreshments and other house needs.

Theater Empty

When Konrad Herling discovered—in the Fall of 1979—that the Utopia Theater, empty for three years, was to be leased as a health spa, he marshalled a group of friends to lobby city council on behalf of performing arts center in the theater. At a public hearing on November 5, 1979, over 60 supporters of the idea urged city help.

Aided by Hal Siegel and Dave Lange, a group called The Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center, Inc., was legally incorporated and obtained non-profit, tax-exempt status.

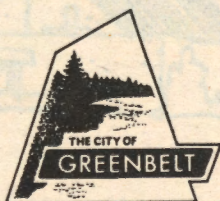

George Christacos, owner of most of the shopping center, leased the theater to the GCAC, and on December 8 an Open House tour showed no seats, no ticket booth, no movie screen. Fundraising began, and over $4,000 was raised by volunteers knocking on doors throughout the community.

Opening Play

The inaugural play in 1980 was presented by the Greenbelt Players (formerly Grenoble Hall Theatre Guild). Largely through the efforts of the Shreibers, Tom and Angela, over 700 people watched Lucille Fletcher's "Night Watch." The Arts group found 240 plush seats which were installed by volunteers Ken Voight, Trix Whitehall, Fred Baluch, John Ward and Tom Scheiber. The box office was soon repaired.

City funds added to County and State Arts Council funds have been important in supplementing box office receipts. City funds provided stage props and more re-

The one and a half story Martin's Crosswinds is designed to accommodate from 125 to 1500 initially. Eventually the facility will be expanded. Materials include Italian blue-veined marble, bronzed glass, beige bricks and a masonry white-beige coating system. Martin's logo — the blue champagne glass — will adorn the building. A canopy extends from the formal entrance to overhang a circular driveway. The facility was designed by Harrison and Crain Architects and construction will be undertaken by Edgar Knauf, Inc., both of Baltimore. A sales office will be on site to handle bookings.

HIGH PRAISE ACCORDED MARTIN'S AT GROUND-BREAKING CEREMONY

by Elaine Skolnik

"We intend to be good citizens in the community," said Martin Resnick at groundbreaking ceremonies for "Martin's Crosswinds" in Maryland Trade Center Park on November 26. About 300 persons heard speakers praise Resnick for his "high quality" and "successful" catering facilities, for his involvement in philanthropic causes and for locating a Martin's banquet/conference/convention center in Prince Georges County.

Martin's Crosswinds, the chain's eighth in Maryland, will be constructed on 8.5 acres between Maryland Trade Center II and the Holiday Inn. Completion is anticipated in the fall of 1985.

"I chose this site because the demographics and labor statistics were good in the area," explained Resnick.

Located at the intersection of the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and the Capital Beltway, the 41-acre Maryland Trade Center Park is within the "Billion Dollar Circle" — the area where construction of highly touted, blue chip projects are moving at a fast pace.

Martin's other facilities are located in the Greater Baltimore Area. The "economic benefits to the communities (where they are located) have been considerable," noted a Martin's spokesman. He anticipated that the operation in Greenbelt would generate 293 full and part time jobs, $805,000 in new State, county and city taxes and $2.5 million in purchases from local suppliers of goods and services.

Resnick's partners are Preston Greene, senior vice-president, Joseph Bivona, executive vice-president and Wayne Resnick, vice-president.

An emotional Resnick recalled his start in the catering business. "Without the government's assistance over the years I would not be here today," he said, explaining that when the banks turned him down for a loan 20 years ago, the Small Business Administration had faith in his venture and gave him a loan. Resnick also credited his parents, Esther and Lewis Resnick, and his wife, Thalia, for Martin's successful beginnings. "My father, a caterer, urged me to go into the business and my wife and mother were Martin's first cooks."

Philanthropic Activities
Resnick's involvement in fundraising is his way of thanking the government for its assistance. John Toll, president of the University of Maryland said, "The Resnick family means a great deal to the University."

Resnick, a director of the University of Maryland's Foundation, serves as President of the President's Club of Baltimore. Co-chairman of fund-raising for St. Francis Academy in Baltimore, he is past chairman of the United Negro College Fund and is on the Board of Regents of Morgan State University. In Baltimore, Resnick is chairman and a founder of Signal 13, a foundation that assists members of the police force during times of personal or family crises.

The Martin's saga in Prince Georges County began in 1980 when Larry Hogan, Sr, was county executive. Hogan reminisced, "I remember the telephone call I placed telling Resnick that I wanted Martin's in the county. One thing or another delayed construction but I am happy to be here today."

The complexities of financing delayed construction. Financing of the 44,000 square foot edifice has been obtained through Equitable Bank with the loan guaranteed by the Maryland Industrial Development Financing Authority.

Metro-rail and Metrobus riders will get their fares refunded when they buy a Trailways bus ticket, if they use the bus or train to get to Trailways' new Washington terminal at First and L Streets, N.E. The refund program continues through March 31, 1985.

Those wishing a refund should ask the Metrobus driver for a transfer when getting on the bus and presenting it, or show a Metro farecard, when purchasing a Trailways ticket.

One More Flag

To the Editor:

There are three fine flags that flutter near Greenbelt's City Hall. There is the American banner, a Maryland flag, and one for Greenbelt itself.

A flag can be a wonderful thing in what it represents. Greenbelt's flag symbolizes the New Deal idealism that built our town, Maryland's flag stands for one of the first thirteen states, and the stars and stripes represents the enlightened self-interest that formed our great union.

Yet, lately it occurs to me that our set of flags is incomplete, for nowhere do I see the United Nations' banner. The UN, for all its faults, is now nearly 40 years old, and it still represents the dream of peace and freedom under some form of world government, a greater than ever necessity in this nuclear age.

Perhaps our city council members will decide to include a UN banner. I hope they do.

Mandan Road Signal

Editor's Note: The following letter of November 29 is from Secretary of the Maryland Department of Transportation to State Senator Leo E. Green. In a handwritten postscript the Secretary told the Senator, "We'll move it just as fast as possible!"
Dear Senator Green:

This is with reference to your letter of November 8, 1984 regarding the planned signalization of the intersection of MD 193 (Greenbelt Road) and Mandan Road. . . .

In reviewing . . . the current State Highway Administration special projects program, we see that this traffic signal project is scheduled for advertisement on February 11, 1985, which is consistent with the information provided to you by former Secretary Bridwell in his letter to you of May 7, 1984. As was indicated at that time, any opportunity that presents itself for moving this project more quickly will be pursued by this Department.

We appreciate your continuing concern. . . .

Council Passes Numerous Resolutions On City Business, Hears Park Requests

by Sandra Barnes

The December 3 city council meeting seemed filled with resolutions: Resolutions to purchase a new telephone communications system, to purchase two mobile radar units, and to raise the limit needed for competitive bids to $10,000. An ordinance to limit parking near the Co-op Supermarket to two hours between 8 a.m. and 10 p.m. quickly passed. And the city agreed to borrow $39,500 from its replacement fund for the purchase of the communication equipment.

Noreen Yoch, representing the Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center and the Greenbelt Trust, invited members of council to be present on Saturday, December 15, when the Trust has scheduled an art show featuring the works of the well-known artist, Arthur James Armstrong. The show will be held from 3-5 p.m. in the city office building. At that time, Armstrong will also unveil a painting commissioned by the Trust which will depict a theatrical theme with a touch of Greenbelt.

Pre-publication prints of the original will be available for purchase as a fundraising mechanism and the original work will become a part of the permanent collection of the Arts Center.

This event, in connection with a major fundraising effort by the Trust, coincides with their fifth anniversary. Money raised will help with a major renovation project planned for the Utopia Theater. Council expressed its support of the efforts of the Trust.

Council agreed to write to the owners of Flakey Jake's restaurant, reportedly the purchasers of McDoogal's restaurant in Greenway Shopping Center. Council hoped that the Flakey Jake owners would replace the large sign in front of the restaurant with a more discreet sign mounted on the building.

Boxwood Parcels

Approximately 20 years ago, green space on two parcels of undeveloped land in Boxwood Village was to be given to the city by the developer. The deal fell through when the developer and the city disagreed over other matters. The developer then failed to pay taxes on the land and it was acquired by the county. The county then told the city that if it wanted the land, the city had to pay the back taxes. The city refused.

Since then citizens living in the area of the disputed property have asked the county to clear out dead trees and falling branches. The county has not been responsive and citizens have asked the city to acquire the property. The city's Parks and Recreation Advisory Board (PRAB) has recommended obtaining the property for a nominal cost, perhaps incurring the cost of transfer. The property has no public access and would not be suitable for development. The city agreed to try to acquire the land.

In response to a letter from the Boys and Girls Club recommending that the parks operation be transferred to a consolidated Parks and Recreation Department, PRAB recommended instead that additional skilled park crewmen be hired to maintain the city's ballfields. The club had complained of poor maintenance of the ballfields.

City Manager James Giese commented that the parks crew is understaffed and that he will ask for additional staff in the next budget. The city manager did not favor separating the parks operation from public works because of the small size of the city operation.

Mayor pro tem Richard Pilski stated that a specialist for parks maintenance and parks planning was needed.

PRAB Chairman Keith Chernikoff stated that better communication between the Boys and Girls Club and the parks crew was needed to coordinate the activities of the group with the activities and needs of the parks and public works crews.

Lake Park Master Plan

Chernikoff asked that the city meet with PRAB to discuss the Lake Park master plan. Several plans have been developed over the years, but council has failed to act on any of them. These plans have considered such things as control of erosion, a new bandstand, bathroom facilities, picnic shelters, a gazebo, and other changes. Council agreed that a meeting was needed.

PRAB also recommended that Boxwood Civic Association's request for a basketball court on Parcel 7 at the corner of Lastner Lane and Ivy Lane be delayed until budget time. Pilski asked that the basketball request be considered as part of the Lake Park master plan. Councilmember Toni Bram replied that parcel 7 was a neighborhood park and not part of the Lake Park. Pilski replied that history on acquisition of the parcel from the developer referred to it in terms of being part of the Lake Park, and it ought to retain that characterization. Council agreed to consider the request for the basketball court during its budget process.

Volunteers Needed

Prince Georges County Hotline, a program of the Mental Health Association of Prince Georges County, Inc., a United Way agency, is looking for volunteers to work the hotline phones for a new program called You're in Charge. Volunteers will provide crisis intervention, information and referral to children who are alone after school. Interested volunteers must be able to work a 4-hour shift per week during the day (2 p.m.-6 p.m.) and participate in a 12-hour free training program. For more information, call the Mental Health Association at 577-3140.

White Elected To NLC Board

Mayors and city council members from every state in the U.S. elected Greenbelt Councilmember Thomas X. White to the National League of Cities' Board of Directors. The election occurred on November 28 at the business meeting of the National League of Cities' (NLC) annual five-day Congress of Cities in Indianapolis, Indiana. White will serve for the next two years as a member-at-large on NLC's 30-member Board of Directors.

White, who also serves on the Maryland Municipal League's (MML) Board of Directors, credits the active and strong support he received from MML and fellow municipal officials in Maryland for his successful bid for national office.

The National League of Cities is the oldest, largest and most representative municipal organization in America. The association is the center of a national network of more than 15,000 cities and towns of all sizes. The Board of Directors governs NLC and determines its policies with assistance from five policy committees and several special task forces.

White was a member of NLC's Energy, Environment and Na-

Bureau of Census Estimates Population

The U.S. Census Bureau has estimated the city's population to be 16,805 as of July 1, 1982. This is down 527 (3%) from the city's 1980 population of 17,332. The decline is based on a continuing decline nationally in average household size.

An appeal was submitted to the Census Bureau, pointing out the residential growth in the city during the pertinent time period. The Census Bureau took note of the additional building construction that has occurred since 1980, but advised that since an estimate 17,158 based on the new housing units constructed deviated from its estimate by only 2.1 percent, the Census Bureau did not feel a change from its original 1982 estimate was warranted.

tural Resources Policy Committee for seven years and served as its chairman for the past year. White commented, "As a local elected official in the Washington metropolitan area, I look forward to using the knowledge I've gained through my work with environmental issues to testify before Congressional committees and federal agency hearings on behalf of the National League of Cities."

Officer Demoted, Waives Hearing

by Bill Rowland

Greenbelt police officer Fred E. Murray has been demoted and otherwise disciplined as the result of a charge of alleged mistreatment of a handcuffed prisoner after a mid-October arrest, according to Greenbelt Police Chief Francis T. Hutson. Murray had been suspended from duty with pay because of the charge and was due to face a Police Hearing Board; however, he waived his legal right to the formal hearing and instead accepted disciplinary measures imposed by Hutson.

As related by Hutson to the News Review, Murray and two other officers arrested a non-resident adult male on October 19 at about 2:30 a.m. on Cherrywood Lane in Springhill Lake and charged him with larceny of an automobile. The other two officers subsequently filed a complaint with Hutson alleging that Murray then handled the prisoner in a rough manner, even though the man was unarmed and handcuffed and was in the custody of the three officers.

After a scheduled absence for training and leave, Murray returned to duty on October 30 and was suspended by Police Lieutenant James Craze. Hutson continued the suspension after meeting the next day with Murray and his attorney and Craze.

According to Hutson, the findings from an internal affairs investigation of the matter by Police Sergeant John Lann led Hutson to place formal charges of improper conduct against Murray. Under Maryland law, placing of the charges entitled Murray to a hearing before a Police Hearing Board that would determine his guilt or innocence, and in the event of a guilty finding would make nonbinding recommendations to the Police Chief for disciplinary measures. But on December 5, Murray and his attorney asked that the Police Chief directly impose discipline in lieu of the Hearing Board process. Hutson thereupon took the following disciplinary action against Murray:

- 1) Demotion from Private First-Class to the rank of Police Officer.
- 2) Loss of 15 days of annual leave.
- 3) Required attendance at a three-day seminar on vicarious liability, such attendance to be scheduled by the Police Chief. ("Vicarious liability," as explained by Hutson, is the liability that police officers can incur based on actions they take.)
- 4) Evaluation to ascertain job fitness.
- 5) Transfer of assignment (in this case a change of shift).

Hutson terminated Murray's suspension, and returned him to duty on December 6.

Council Still in Abeyance On Cablecasting Meetings

by Michelle Meyers

The question of whether city council should cablecast its meetings is still undecided among the council members. However, the city's Public Access and Local Origination Advisory Committee, as of November 13, submitted a report recommending that all regular council meetings, as well as charter meetings and public hearings, be cablecast.

The city staff reported that of nine municipalities which are wired, seven cablecast all council meetings and most public hearings over the access channel A-10.

In addition to the cablecast recommendation, the committee also believes a part-time camera operator should be paid on an hourly basis, and that consideration should be given to establishing a minimum amount in case meetings run short.

"We (the council) don't have anything to be ashamed of, we're all good actors and actresses," joked Mayor Pro Tem Richard Pilski at the December 3 meeting. Pilski, who spoke in favor of cablecast, hopes to start 1985 with cablecast council meetings. He believes that some council members and citizens are fearful of what will be seen by the viewers at home. He also expressed the hope that cablecasting will spark an interest within the community concerning its government and will cause more people to become involved.

No other council members commented on the cablecast question because it was decided that further discussion would take place at the next council meeting. However, there was discussion about whether $5,000 already budgeted should be used to purchase video equipment, and whether a decision about the purchase should come before a decision on cablecasting.

Councilmember Toni Bram demanded, "We must have proper equipment in place and experienced people to run it. We need the equipment even if we don't decide to cablecast meetings."

But councilmember Thomas White argued, "Let's first decide whether to cablecast, then get the equipment."

Both the questions of cablecasting council meetings and purchasing video equipment are excently the multi-colored curtains that hang over most of the side walls.

A 17-person board directs the life of the Arts Center. The officers (Konrad, president; Norene Yoch, vice-president; John Ward, treasurer; and secretary Suzanne Plogman) and board members are more often found cleaning, painting, fixing, carrying, and doing the dozens of physical tasks needed doing at the Center.

Fund Raising

Raising money has been a priority which created bake and rummage sales, paper drives, membership efforts and ice cream and root beer sales at the annual Labor Day Festival. Prominent in these efforts have been Gail and Ken Voight, Trix Whitehall, Paula Lipman, Norene Yoch and Nick Mydra. For three years, Ann and Tony Pisano have run monthly flea markets on the mall during the Spring and Summer. In June, the Arts Center will host its Third Annual Arts & Crafts Fair in Roosevelt Mall.

Behind a theater curtain donated by a former Utopia Theater tenant, Tom Schreiber has built or directed the building of all the sets for the Greenbelt Players during these five years. The Players now schedule a gala after their opening performance, and Lori Hopson Paul arranges for someone to sign for the hearing impaired the second Friday of each play run.

Growing Membership

A growing membership in the Greenbelt Arts Center has brought new volunteers to help plan and stage plays. Theater renovation continues. There is a quarterly newsletter. The first break with the "all volunteer" idea has come with the recent hiring of a theater consultant to oversee aspects of sales and public relations.

The theater is now booked almost every weekend through June of 1985. "We've had our frustrations," Herling admits, "and some of them are still with us—there's always something to repair—but it has all been worth it." Herling adds that "we are not a performing arts center for Greenbelt alone. People from all over the metro area have come to our programs. As we improve the appearance of the theater, patrons will feel more comfortable about an evening out at the Utopia. Our toughest years are behind us. I feel very optimistic about our future."

Yet Jesse Jacobs of Hoyer's office maintains that "The last word the GSA said to the Congressman about the issue of the BARC lands was that it is on hold until Hoyer's legislation is decided."

So Hoyer and others in Greenbelt do not consider the BARC land to be a dead issue. Their concern for these parcels and other future parcels of BARC land will still remain, says Greenbelt mayor Gil Weidenfeld.

County Response

For county councilman Richard Castaldi, the issue of the BARC land is a deeply affecting one to Greenbelt residents. "We're on the record that we want to maintain that BARC property as open land, keep it as a research facility. In addition, we have a master plan (for Prince George's county) and this should have been coordinated with local plans. Before anything is done that will affect us, we should know about it."

"We have coordinated that land of BARC to remain as open land and this plan from the GSA throws off the master plan. It has its impact felt strongly here. I definitely hope Hoyer's legislation passes."

Since the early 1970s, 2200 acres of BARC's land have been given away. Currently, BARC has 8200 acres left for research use. It is touted as the largest research facility in the world. Research is conducted on diverse agricultural concerns such as human nutrition, insect physiology, and plant virology.

Consequently, many critics of GSA's actions say any further loss of BARC's land also means a further loss of BARC's research effectiveness. For Greenbelt, further loss of BARC's land may mean loss of a buffer against noise and congestion, says Weidenfeld. But GSA maintains the disposal of this BARC land is logical and reasonable, since it is "excess land."

GSA has maintained since 1979 that "optimal use" of the land was not occurring at BARC. Yet many officials on state and local level concur, along with BARC and the Department of Agriculture, that this is not a fault, because "most of the time the ongoing research projects at BARC by their very nature require less than optimum use," said a press release from the Department of Agriculture in 1979.

CONSIDERING A CHANGE IN RESIDENCE?

There are three key elements to consider:

- A) Your needs: things you positively have to have.

Greenbelt and Maryland: Each Founded on a Vision

To link Greenbelt to Maryland's 350th anniversary, City staff member Dorothy Lauber recently wrote an essay comparing the city and state.

Directed by City Council, City Manager James Giese asked Lauber to write about Greenbelt's place in state history. Using Mary Van Cleve's "We Pioneers," written in 1937 to reflect the aspirations of residents of this new community, Lauber expanded the theme. She compared their hopes with the plans of the Calvert family who founded and guided the colony of Maryland.

When Mary Van Cleve wrote We Pioneers shortly after moving to Greenbelt in October 1937, she captured the spirit of our first families. Now, in 1984 as Maryland celebrates its 350th Anniversary, articles about the first English settlers are appearing to remind us of the progressive ideas established in Maryland by those who came first. As we begin planning for our 50th Anniversary, it seems fitting to consider that, just as the original settlements in Maryland were founded on a bold vision, so was Greenbelt.

The Calvert family, beginning with George Calvert (the first Lord Baltimore) and continuing through his sons Cecilius, Leonard and Philip and their sons, had a vision — creating a New World settlement where people could think and worship as they pleased. The result was a bold experiment in religious freedom and the separation of Church and State which became a cornerstone of America's basic liberties.

Rexford Tugwell's vision was to build a network of model communities outside of central cities that would demonstrate the soundness of planning and operating towns according to certain "garden city" principles; provide low-rent housing in healthful surroundings for families of modest incomes; and provide useful work for thousands of unemployed. The results were Greenbelt and its two sister cities—Greenhills, Ohio and Greendale, Wisc., and in more recent years communities such as Columbia, Md. and Reston, Va. Some of those coming here for the first time tell us how they are struck by the contrast between the scene in Greenbelt, an embodiment of Tugwell's vision, and that of the usual suburban scene as provided by most private developers.

A Charter

The charter drafted by George Calvert, completed by his son Cecilius, and granted by King Charles I, was a firm foundation from which to launch the colony of Maryland. It attracted gentlemen investors with the promise of land, power and freedom, and was flexible enough to allow government to evolve and change as needed.

Greenbelt's charter was written, enacted and effective months before the first families arrived (as was Maryland's). While simple in form, it provided for the first council-manager form of municipal government in Maryland, with an efficient division of responsibility between a changing legislative body (the City Council) and a permanent administrative staff. It was so well written that it has required no significant change in almost 50 years.

Opportunity for a Better Life

England in the 17th century was overcrowded with massive numbers of unemployed and unskilled workers. Catholics could not openly practice their religion and paid fines for not attending the Church of England; nor could they hold political office. Younger sons from families with property could inherit only a small portion of estates in the form of money since property usually went to the eldest son. Lord Baltimore originated the idea that ordinary people should be offered an opportunity to better themselves and at the same time practice their religion freely and participate fully in civil and political life. He offered 2,000 acres to anyone who would pay passage for five able-bodied workers and equip them for a year; 16 gentlemen investors — mostly younger sons — accepted this offer, and they and their workers accompanied Leonard Calvert to Maryland on the Ark and the Dove. Most of the other passengers were indentured servants who worked for four years for their passage and equipment; at the end of their contracts they received land, tools, seed, a suit of clothing, and an opportunity for a better life.

The Washington area in the mid-1930s was also overcrowded with massive numbers of unemployed and unskilled workers. Greenbelt's first residents were selected from thousands of low-income applicants who were living in small, crowded apartments, usually in blighted or slum areas. Included in low-income applicants were office workers, clerks, mechanics and skilled laborers. Applicants filled out long questionnaires and most were interviewed in their homes. It was made clear to them by the Selection Committee that they were expected to work and participate in civil and political affairs. Younger families were particularly eager to live here, and this was preferred, as they were less settled and were generally more interested in the purposes and theories involved in the Greenbelt type of living. Like Maryland's first settlers, they, too, were seeking a better life.

Toleration

The struggle to survive as a haven of religious toleration marked the beginnings of free thought in this country and set Maryland apart from the other colonies. It became a refuge for a number of people with unpopular beliefs and convictions—Anglicans who had been expelled from Puritan Massachusetts, Puritans expelled from Virginia,

We Pioneers

We did not arrive in Greenbelt after long, tiresome miles by covered wagon; nor did we find this place by chance. We were not the first to gaze upon this spot of ground, nor did we cut down trees in order to build our homes. Nor is it necessary to clear the land to plant crops that we may eat, nor dig a well that we may quench our thirst.

Yet, we are pioneers — of a new way of living. We are the sculptors handling the soft, yielding clay of a new community. What form shall we mold out of it?

This project has given most of us an opportunity we'd never anticipated. We are in the process of creating homes. Our families and our children will live under laws of our own making. Only in our fondest and most youthful dreams have we imagined such a chance. What will we make of it?

Let us make good laws — wise laws, and not too many of them. Let us keep ourselves, our community, our city government, our ideals, as clean as our new windswept roofs. Let us conduct ourselves and the management of our Greenbelt in such a way as to deserve the pride with which all America will be looking on.

We who have been endowed with the greatest heritage on earth by our ancestors still have that hardiness and determination underneath. Greenbelt will be a success, with the cooperation of her citizens and with the help of God. We will have proved ourselves — we pioneers.

Quakers persecuted everywhere, and of course, Catholics who lived precariously in England. Religious freedom was put to the test a number of times prior to the American Revolution as it did not sit well with the Puritans when they controlled the English Parliament, or ironically, sometimes even with Puritans who had come here to escape religious persecution. The Calverts lost control of Maryland three times, and Catholicism went underground for one 25 year period. The Calvert's original vision of religious freedom was not fully restored until 1776 and independence from England.

From the beginning, one of Greenbelt's distinguishing characteristics has been its emphasis on religious tolerance and cooperation. In order to have a religiously diversified community, the families selected to live here were 30% Catholic, 7% Jewish, and 64% Protestant (including Mormons), the same ratio as existed in the Washington area. Interdenominational Protestant services were held at Center School beginning in November, 1937, and shortly thereafter a mission was established by the Catholic Parish in Berwyn which met in the Greenbelt Theater. A Mormon Church and a Hebrew congregation formed in 1938 while the Lutherans drove to Mt. Rainier to attend services until 1944. An Inter-Faith Committee was established by these groups in 1938 and it became one of Greenbelt's greatest sources of strength. It considered questions dealing with brotherhood and social justice, fostered religious understanding and promoted new friendships. The churches worked together to persuade a reluctant Federal Government to sell them land for their churches in 1949, but the best demonstration of brotherhood in this community occurred when members of all faiths worked side by side to help build the Jewish Community Center. When asked what she remembered most about the ten years she lived here, Edith Frank recently said, "There was so much tolerance. The people were Protestant, Catholic and Jewish. My husband was a Mormon. We were friends with all the groups. It was a very good experience, and everybody cooperated and got along. I am so sorry that people today aren't encouraged to do this instead of noticing their differences so much."

We have a special community

It's the Law in Greenbelt

Sec. 17-2 Littering

(a) It shall be unlawful to litter the streets, roads, walks, parks, parking areas, recreation areas or other public areas within the city . . . by discarding boxes, cans, bottles, refuse, trash, garbage, trimmings from lawns, hedges, shrubs or trees, or any fuel oil . . . or lubricating oil . . . or any rubbish or loose material of any kind.

New Organization Forms

Greenbelt area divorced spouses of service personnel who wish to join E.X.P.O.S.E. (ex-partners of service men/women for equality) may call Charlotte Broughton, 927-6906. The organization's goal is to restore benefits to those denied them because of the divorce.

Expecting a Refund?

Internal Revenue Service has $62 tax refunds, averaging $121, for area taxpayers they can't find. The refund checks were returned to the IRS marked undeliverable by the Postal Service, some because taxpayers had moved without leaving a forwarding address, had married and changed name and address, or had even given an incorrect address.

Anyone who is expecting a 1983 or previous recent year's refund should call 488-3100. Tax refund checks have been returned from the following people with Greenbelt addresses: Mark I. Adelman, Elizabeth Ann Allen, Daniel K. and Marian L. Boylan, Royce E. Christian, McCoy W. Lee, Thomas G. Ludwig, and Jerrel L. Wheeler.

here in Greenbelt, Maryland today — a city whose center is formed in the shape of a graceful crescent set on a background of green, with a lake and park, playgrounds and ballfields, walks, well built homes, schools, churches, recreational facilities, a healthy environment and a good government. There has been much growth in the past 25 years with two new shopping centers, office buildings, garden apartments, townhouses and condominiums. We have all this today because of the visions of the Calverts and Rexford Tugwell, their excellent charters, and the willingness of Maryland's first settlers and Greenbelt's pioneers to take the opportunities that were offered to them and work cooperatively to build new lives. Let us remember our heritage and try to be worthy of such a gift. Let us continue what was begun by those who came before us.

addressed traffic problems in the Greenbelt area. He reported that extension of Hanover Parkway to Good Luck Road will be started soon, that improvements to Greenbelt Road and the Baltimore-Washington Parkway should begin next year and that the grade separation at Greenbelt Road and Kenilworth Avenue is underway.

Representing the city on the platform were Mayor Pro Tem Richard Pilski and City Manager James Giese. Giese said, "Many developers have found that Greenbelt is not the best place for them to develop because the city has continuously sought quality development . . . I can't tell you how many developers' proposals did not get the city council's approval. That was not the case with Martin's. They are going to build a quality facility and, just as important, traffic generation will be during off-peak hours for workers and commuters."

Pilski predicted that "Martin's Crosswinds" would achieve greater success than the other Baltimore area operations. "I didn't think anyone anticipated the tremendous growth in this area in such a relatively short time," he said. Recalling that four years ago, at the Greenway Shopping Center groundbreaking, he had mentioned the concept of annexation to Maryland Trade Center developers Neil Coakley and Fred Williams, Pilski noted, "Now, the park is totally within Greenbelt's borders."

Coakley observed, "We were pioneers in this intersection, one of the most heavily trafficked arteries in the United States that will soon be very identifiable in the amount of traffic that goes by." As he spoke he pointed to the sky, where a plane flew overhead, banner trailing, welcoming Martin's.

Master of Ceremonies was Frank De Francis, Secretary of the Maryland Economic Development Administration, who de-

Arts Trust to Offer Art Show, Unveiling

In celebration of the 5th anniversary of the Greenbelt Cultural Arts Center, the Greenbelt Arts Trust is planning an art show and unveiling ceremony at the City Council Chambers on Saturday, Dec. 15, 3 to 5 p.m.

The Arts Trust has commissioned artist Jim Armstrong to paint an original work entitled "Utopia Theater." Pre-publication prints of this work will be available at a fund-raising benefit for the Greenbelt Arts Center's ongoing renovation of the theater.

Armstrong is a full-time artist whose work in watercolors has received numerous awards. He is also a book illustrator. His major works have concentrated on images of the western states.

A membership drive is being launched by The Arts Trust, an organization established to publicize and aid in material ways the work of the Arts Center as a cultural showplace in Greenbelt.

scribed Martin's as an institution for "happy occasions." Kathy Giannetti, President of the Prince Georges County Chamber of Commerce, noted that Martin's would be the county's largest catering facility.

In extolling the Martin's operation, the Baltimore Comptroller, Hyman Pressman, told Greenbelters, "You ain't seen nothing yet!"

Baltimore Councilman Anthony Armstrong, representing his city said, "What Martin's has done in the Baltimore area they will do for you." Judge Albert Sklar unveiled the building plaque and the Resnicks turned the first shovel of ground. A Baltimore rabbi offered the invocation and benediction. A reception followed in the Holiday Inn.

"She Loves Me" Is at Petrucci's

The musical comedy "She Loves Me" is playing at Petrucci's Main Street Dinner Theatre in Laurel, through January 13, 1985.

A holiday love story about two clerks in a perfume shop who bicker incessantly by day and, unknowingly, are in the same lonely hearts club writing "Dear Friend" love letters to each other at night is funny, entertaining and very well done. The production, directed by David Harper, contains 25 musical numbers played by a live orchestra.

The theater, refurbished this year both inside and out, has a new orchestra pit behind the stage.
